REPORT NO.

1. Article 27 of the Constitution of China confers on the National Assembly the authority to amend the Constitution and to elect the President and the Vice-President of the Republic. The National Assembly, in accordance with this authority, revised the Constitution and elected the President and the Vice-President of the Republic.

(1) The Youth Party and the Democratic Socialist Party were opposed to any change in the Constitution. Having members qualified to participate in the Cabinet or Executive Yuan but without any member qualified to be President, both minority parties considered it better not to increase the power of the President as this would mean a decrease in the power of the Cabinet. Generalissimo CHIANG refused to be named presidential candidate by the Kuomintang because the power of the President was very much limited by the Constitution, and it would be impossible for the President to keep the Legislative Yuan from dominating the Executive Yuan, resulting in a constant change of Cabinet - a condition especially undesirable during the Civil War with the Chinese Communists. Because of this, the minority parties reconsidered. Finally they agreed on the "Emergency Measures" for the President, preferring Generalissimo CHIANG's more or less assured control of the Legislative Yuan. The small number of "non-partisans", almost all of whom were either pro-Kuomintang or indifferent, naturally supported non-partisan MO Te-hui's suggestion to increase the "Emergency Measures" for the President in the Constitution. With pressure from the Generalissimo on the Kuomintang, the rightist factions of the Kuomintang were obliged to accept the "Emergency Measures" and not make further changes in the Constitution.

(2) The election of the President was a matter of formality rather than democratic competition. CHIANG K'ai-shek had to be made the first President of China. CHU Cheng served as the other presidential candidate simply as an ornamental accompaniment. The election of the Vice-President from four Kuomintang candidates - although they were not named officially by the Kuomintang - was an event to be found only in China. LI Tsung-jen's election as the new Vice-President was the outstanding development of the National Assembly. His election showed that the non-CC or non-CC-leaning Kuomintang members were beginning to unite and combat with some success the CH'EN brothers' rule of the Kuomintang.

2. The delegates to the National Assembly included members of the Kuomintang, Youth Party, Democratic Socialist Party and non-partisans. These delegates were elected as regional representatives (by province or municipality), as vocational-professional representatives (such as the various Women's Associations, Labor Unions, etc.), or special representatives (such as Mohammedans, Manchus, etc.). Of the regional representatives, only those from Kiangsu and Chekiang Provinces were primarily CC Clique men; however, the majority of the vocational-professional representatives were CC Clique followers. Some Kuomintang military men, such as FU Tso-yi, who are fighting in strategic areas, did not attend the National Assembly. A special category involved in the elections of delegates for the National Assembly were the so-called "freely elected" representatives. As the Kuomintang promised the Youth Party and the Democratic Socialist Party - the two minority parties - a certain number of seats in the National Assembly, many Kuomintang members were not nominated by their party as candidates for election as delegates to the Assembly. To satisfy these members, the Kuomintang then ruled that any person desiring to become a candidate could do so by submitting a petition signed by over 500 signers, thus making the person eligible as a candidate for election. Because of this, many non-nominated Kuomintang men joined the ranks of the "non-partisans" and achieved petitions with over 500 signers and became candidates for election. When the elections were completed, about 600 such delegates actually received enough votes to be elected as delegates to the National Assembly. However, since the Kuomintang was already committed to the minority parties, these so-called "freely elected" delegates, although technically elected to the Assembly, were not permitted to attend the Assembly. They were compelled to give way to minority party representatives who had not received sufficient votes, had done little if any campaigning and simply felt assured of their being made delegates to the Assembly (which they were). Of these 600, about 134 were Kuomintang members and these 134 were compelled by the Kuomintang to give up their seats in the Assembly. The General Election Office gave each of these 134 representatives a Certificate of Election which stated that each had been elected as a representative. However, since they were not permitted to attend the Assembly, these 134 refused to accept the Certificates.

The following is a chronology of events of the National Assembly from 29 March to 1 May 1948:

3. 29 March: Opening ceremony with 1639 representatives attending. The "freely selected" representatives were not permitted to attend. On 28 March 10 of them entered the National Assembly auditorium and refused to come out, claiming that they would fast until they and their fellow "freely elected" delegates were accepted as regular representatives. At about 4 a.m. on 29 March the 10 representatives left the National Assembly auditorium after hours of persuasion by Kuomintang authority CH'EN Li-fu, Chief and Deputy Chief of the General Election Office CHIANG Li-sheng (張厲生) and HUNG Lan-yu (洪蘭友) respectively, Archbishop Paul Yu Pin, Dr. HU Shih, and others; these ten men were

YANG Ch'iao-hsin (楊翹新)	CHOU Yu (周游)
KU Tse-tzu (顧澤祖)	HUANG Ho (黃謙)
LI Hua-ch'eng (李化成)	SU Ming-fang (蘇銘芳)
LIU Pin (劉斌)	YANG Shih-lin (楊世麟)
CHANG Fu (張敷)	LIEN T'u-i-an (連退庵)
4. 30 March: First Preparatory Session with 1798 representatives attending. Suggestions on the election of the Presidium were discussed without any decision being reached. The ten "freely elected" representatives continued their fast.
5. 31 March: Second Preparatory Session with 1642 representatives attending. General agreement was reached to increase the number of members of the Presidium to 85.
6. 1 April: Third Preparatory Session with 1687 representatives attending. The seating order for representatives was decided by lot. SU Ming-fang and YANG Shih-lin, two of the 10 on fast, received their documents stating that they were elected and registered at the National Assembly Registration Office; the other eight continued to fast.
7. 2 April: Fourth Preparatory Session with 2061 representatives attending. The proposal to increase the number of members of the Presidium to 85, approved by the Legislative Yuan, was passed. The procedure for election of the Presidium was decided. The eight "freely elected" representatives continued to fast.
8. 3 April: Fifth Preparatory Session with 2211 representatives attending. The election of the Presidium was held, but was rendered void because the names of CH'ENG Chien (程潛) and HO Chung-han (賀衷寒) were omitted as candidates for the Presidium by mistake and because some representatives had not received their ballots. The eight "freely elected" representatives were still on fast.

9. 4 April: Holiday. Because the Youth Party gave in, CHANG Fu, one of the eight on fast, received his document stating that he was elected.
10. 5 April: Sixth Preparatory Session with 2339 representatives attending. The Presidium of 85 members was elected and HUNG Lan-yu was made Secretary-General of the National Assembly. Upon the persuasion of MO Te-hui, HU Shih, YU Pin and CH'EN Li-fu, CHANG Fu ate some food and the seven other on fast took shots of glucose.
11. 6 April: First regular session with 1770 representatives attending. The Rules of Debate were discussed. The 85 members of the Presidium were divided into 10 groups to take turns in serving at the sessions to follow.
12. 7 April: Second regular session with 1800 representatives attending. The Rules of Debate were again discussed: The majority objected to Article 17 of the Rules of Debate which states that the scope of proposition shall be within the limits of Article 27 of the Constitution, which states that "the functions and powers of the National Assembly shall be to elect the President and the Vice President of the Republic, to recall the President and the Vice President, to amend the Constitution and to hold referenda on amendments to the Constitution proposed by the Legislative Yuan."
13. 8 April: Third regular session with 2040 representatives attending. Article 17 of the Rules of Debate was cancelled. The following was added to the Rules of Debate: "During the convocation of the National Assembly the report on Government administration will be heard, the national policy will be examined and cross-examined and suggestions will be brought forward." The discussion of the other articles of the Rules of Debate was interrupted by a suggestion that the Assembly's agenda be changed to allow immediate settlement of the problem of the "freely elected" delegates, that settlement be made according to a proposal signed by over 1000 other representatives which proposed that all "freely elected" representatives be permitted to attend the Assembly. The disorder following this interruption was quieted by the sudden appearance of Generalissimo CHIANG, and the other articles of the Rules of Debate were discussed and minor modifications made.
14. 9 April: Fourth regular session with 2396 representatives attending. Generalissimo CHIANG attended the session and reported on the present economic and military situation, stating that there was no danger of a crisis in spite of rumors to the contrary. No cross-examination or suggestions were made regarding his report. This session was the most quiet and orderly of all the sessions held since 29 March.
15. 10 April: Fifth regular session with 1837 representatives attending. The agenda for the remaining days of the Assembly was arranged.
16. 11 April: Holiday. Representatives chosen from the Presidium presented the Generalissimo with a request that he approve and get immediate approval from the State Council of a proposal that all "freely elected" representatives be allowed to attend the Assembly. This request was signed by over 1000 representatives to the Assembly.
17. 12 April: Sixth regular session with 1574 representatives attending. General PAI Ch'ung-hsi attended and made his scheduled report on the military situation. Criticisms of the military effort were made by various representatives. Some CC clique members of the Assembly suggested severe punishment for General CH'EN Ch'eng and other military officials who had failed to discharge successfully their various duties.
18. 13 April: Seventh regular session with 1732 representatives attending. Economic reports were made by Finance Minister YU Hung-chün (C.K. YU/俞鴻鈞) and Economic Affairs Minister CH'EN Ch'i-tien (陳啟天). Reports on communications and food administration were made by Communications Minister YU Fa-wei (俞大維) and Food Minister YU Fei-p'eng (俞飛鵬).
19. 14 April: Eighth regular session with 1587 representatives attending. Reports on foreign affairs, internal affairs, education and social affairs were made by Minister of Foreign Affairs WANG Shih-chih, Minister of Interior CHANG Li-sheng, Minister of Education CHU Chia-hua and Minister of Social Affairs KU Cheng-kang. Still no solution was reached regarding the "freely elected" delegates who had not yet received their Certificates. CHANG Fu was taken to the hospital and the other seven representatives continued to fast and were in poor physical condition.

20. 15 April: Ninth regular session in the morning; with 2032 representatives attending. Revision of the Constitution was discussed and various proposals were made. Tenth session in the afternoon with 1745 representatives attending. Examination, discussion and criticism of the economic and political reports made by the various Ministers took place.
21. 16 April: No general session. Over 1000 proposals which were received by the Assembly up to 15 April were divided into seven categories and were discussed separately by the seven examination committees formed: The first committee took care of proposals concerning the Constitution; the second, national defense; the third, foreign affairs; the fourth, "economics of the people"; the fifth, social welfare; the sixth, education; and the seventh, special problems concerning border provinces. A public notice or bulletin was placed on the National Assembly Bulletin Board stating that CHIANG Chung-cheng (蔣中正)(CHIANG K'ai-shek) and CHU Cheng were the two presidential candidates; 2489 representatives signed for CHIANG and 109 for CHU as candidates.
22. 17 April: Eleventh session with 1877 representatives attending. Since the examination of the revision of the Constitution was not completed on 16 April, it was decided in this session to allow the first examining committee to continue its discussion before presenting ideas to the general session for decision.
23. 18 April: Twelfth session with 2045 representatives attending. The four temporary provisions of the Constitution, to be effective during the period of national crisis, were approved by the majority and passed the second and third readings: "In accordance with the procedure stipulated in paragraph 1 of Article 174, the following temporary provisions to be effective during the period of national crisis are hereby enacted:
- (1) The President, during the period of national crisis, may, by a resolution of the Executive Yuan, take emergency measures to avert an imminent danger to the security of the state & the people or to cope with serious financial or economic changes without being subject to the restrictions stipulated in Articles 39 or 43 of the Constitution.
  - (2) The emergency measures mentioned in the foregoing paragraphs may be modified or abrogated by the Legislative Yuan in accordance with paragraph 2 of Article 57 of the Constitution.
  - (3) The period of national crisis may be declared terminated by the President on his own initiative or at the request of the Legislative Yuan.
  - (4) The President shall call an extraordinary session of the first constitutional National Assembly not later than 25 December 1950 to discuss all proposals pertaining to the amendments to the Constitution. If at that time the period of national crisis has not yet been declared terminated in accordance with the foregoing provisions, the extraordinary session of the National Assembly shall decide whether or not the temporary provisions be continued in force or be abrogated."
- The "freely elected" representatives, who were supposed to give up their seats to party nominees, received their Certificates of Election with the promise that they would not attend the present sessions of the National Assembly. The eight men stopped their fast.
24. 19 April: Thirteenth session with 2734 representatives attending. CHIANG K'ai-shek was elected President by 2430 votes while CHU received only 269.
25. 20 April: No general session. The examining committees, which had finished only 150 proposals by 17 April, finished examining the rest of the total of 858 proposals. A notice appeared on the National Assembly Bulletin Board that the following were the candidates for the Vice President:
SUN Fo (SUNG K'o)(孫科), YÜ Yu-jen, LI Tsung-jen, CH'ENG Ch'ien, MO Te-hui and HSU Fu-lin (徐傳霖).
26. 21 April: Fourteenth session with 2035 representatives attending. Suggestions and requests contained in the 298 proposals are generalized by the examining committees and are passed in the session with little discussion.
27. 22 April: Fifteenth session with 1670 representatives attending. Generalized suggestions and requests contained in the rest of the proposals were passed in this session.

25X1X

KMT indicates Kuomintang member. For the Clique affiliation of the Kuomintang members, [REDACTED] 25X1A

YP indicates Youth Party member.

DS indicates Democratic member.

NP indicates non-partisan.

UK indicates a member whose party background is unknown or whose party background has not been confirmed. Almost all of these were "freely elected" representatives; roughly, 70% of them are KMT members and 30% are actually non-partisans.

The total number of representatives attending the National Assembly was 2783, among whom the names of approximately 2566 are listed below; the names not included below are chiefly those of Youth Party or Democratic Socialist Party members who achieved their seats in the Assembly through their parties' bargaining with the Kuomintang. It is pertinent to remember that published lists, such as those of the General Election Office, do not agree on the Chinese characters and/or the names of various representatives. The list presented below attempts to clarify some of these discrepancies.)

33. The following information concerns Mongolian and Tibetan Representatives to the National Assembly (NA), presented according to regional representation.

Where the Mongolian or Tibetan name is known, it is given first, followed by the Chinese phoneticization and the Chinese name, if known. A few of the names presented below are duplicated in previous pages of this report. Although no biographical information is presented on the delegates previously mentioned in this report, biographical data on the Mongolian and Tibetan representatives are given because of the paucity of information on some officials of these ethnic groups. The Mongolian representatives listed below are advocates of the so-called "Racial Principle" ("Mongolia for the Mongols") unless otherwise stated. In this report, the Chinese characters, 蒙藏委員會 (Meng Tsang Wei Yuan Hui), are translated "Mongolian-Tibetan Council"; however, the Chinese Yearbook for 1944-45 uses the phrase, "Commission on Mongolian and Tibetan Affairs", as a translation of the same characters. The Chinese names and/or Chinese phoneticizations and the political affiliations of the delegates were obtained from a politically independent, well-informed Chinese professional man. The Mongolian names and the Tibetan names were obtained from a usually reliable Mongol expert. The information in items 1-61 on names is not necessarily accurate in some cases; for an explanation of the inaccuracies, see SO-16818.)
